Public Benefits

Federal, state, and territorial public benefits programs can help with income, food, health care, home energy, telephone, and other needs for those who are eligible. Eligibility requirements vary with each public benefit and sometimes are different from state to state and territory to territory. Some benefits are for the family and others are for children or older adults individually. Children are often eligible for public benefits even if their caregivers do not have guardianship or legal custody. Kin/grandfamily caregivers may become eligible for benefits programs when their household size increases.

Help with Public Benefits

BenefitsCheckUp

BenefitsCheckUp, powered by the National Council on Aging, offers a free and private way to complete a questionnaire to find out if older adults and people with disabilities qualify for certain programs that pay for food, increase income, and cover home and health care costs. The specific programs covered by the questionnaire on the website are listed below. Once the questionnaire is completed, the website generates a list of eligible programs and contact information. BenefitsCheckUp does not currently connect individuals to programs for grandparents raising their grandchildren, but their Frequently Asked Questions page includes links to websites for the Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP), the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP), Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF, Child Only Grant), and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) for Children.

Key Public Benefits: Income

Each state and territory administers federal funds that provide cash assistance to families in need. Some states and territories also offer other forms of financial assistance.

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF)

Cash assistance may be available to eligible children and their kin/grandfamily caregivers. There are two types of TANF grants: child-only and family grants. In virtually all states and territories, caregiver income is not considered in determining eligibility for TANF child-only grants. TANF child-only grants are based solely on the income of the child and are designed to help meet the needs of just the child. Unlike TANF family grants, child-only grants are not subject to time limits or work requirements.

Social Security

A multigenerational program, Social Security provides income benefits to adults, older adults, and children. In addition to Retirement and Disability benefits, there is a program that provides Survivors Benefits. If a child's parent is deceased, Survivors Benefits may be available based on the child's parent's earnings. Your grandchild (not other kin children) may also qualify for benefits based on your work record. The Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program pays benefits to disabled adults and children who have limited income and resources. SSI benefits are also payable to people 65 and older without disabilities who meet the financial limits. Residents of the Virgin Islands are not eligible for SSI.

Key Public Benefits: Nutrition

Kin/grandfamily caregivers and their families may be eligible for assistance with groceries, meals, infant formula, and nutrition education. These are some of the key nutrition benefits programs and resources.

Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)

SNAP is the new name for the federal Food Stamp Program. It helps low-income individuals and families buy the food they need for good health. For more information on SNAP and kinship/grandfamilies, please see Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program for Kinship/Grandfamilies.

Food and Nutrition Services of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Child Nutrition Programs

The schools, early childhood education programs, child care centers, afterschool programs, and other programs that children attend may offer free or reduced-price meals through the federal Child Nutrition Programs, which provide breakfast, lunch, snacks, summer meals, and milk. Contact the school, center, or program to ask if they participate in any of the child nutrition programs and how to apply. Kin/grandfamily caregivers should inform the program that they are raising the child and share whether or not they are doing so through a court order.

Key Public Benefits: Health Care

Kin/grandfamily caregivers and the children they are raising may be eligible for health insurance through Medicare and/or Medicaid, and they may also be eligible for help with prescription drugs.

Health Insurance for Children

Kin/grandfamily caregivers may apply for free or low-cost health and dental insurance for the children they are raising through the Children's Health Insurance Program

(CHIP), which provides health coverage to eligible children through Medicaid. CHIP and Medicaid are the national names, and the Virgin Islands may use different names.

Key Public Benefits: Tax Credits

Bona fide residents of the Virgin Islands should file taxes with the Virgin Islands, rather than filing with the federal government. Virgin Islanders are not eligible for all U.S. tax credits, but there may be comparable credits in the Virgin Islands tax system. Contact the U.S. Virgin Islands Bureau of Internal Revenue for more information.

Education

The U.S. Department of Education offers a parent site that has a wide range of helpful information for parents and caregivers regarding children's education from early childhood through college, special needs, disabilities, language challenges, and gifted students.

Educational Enrollment

Kin/grandfamily caregivers can contact their local school district's administrative office or their local school to find out how to register the child and what paperwork is needed. Caregivers may need birth records, health records, or previous school records. Some states have laws that allow kin/grandfamily caregivers without legal custody or guardianship to enroll the children they are raising in school. These laws are often called education "consent" laws, but they may be called something else in your state or territory. The Virgin Islands does not appear to have such a law; check the Grandfamilies.org Online Database to see if a state you may be interested in has such a law.

To learn more about educational enrollment on the Virgin Islands, send an email to the address that corresponds with your school district:

Early Intervention, Special Education, and Related Services

The Federal Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA)

From birth to age 21, children who have learning disabilities, physical disabilities, or other special needs may be able to get early intervention, preschool, and special education services in school through the federal IDEA. Services may include speech, physical, and occupational therapies.

The IDEA requires that states and territories identify, locate, and evaluate all children with disabilities who may need special education and related services and who are between the ages of 3 and 21. Once the evaluation team, which includes a child's caregivers, has decided if a child is eligible for early intervention, preschool, or special education services, an Individual Family Service Plan (IFSP; birth to three years of age) or an Individual Education Plan (IEP; 3 to 21 years of age) is developed and services should begin shortly.

Legal

The following legal relationships may be options for both those children exiting the foster care system and those outside the system. For those families who do not want to establish a legal relationship, consent and power of attorney laws may be available.

All of the following options are presented in general terms. This area of the law is created at the state and territorial level, so how these options are defined and which ones are available can vary significantly.

Adoption

With adoption, the kin/grandfamily caregiver becomes the parent in the eyes of the law. This fact makes access to services on behalf of the child the same as for any parent. Adoption ends all of the birth parents' rights and responsibilities, which means that birth parents cannot go to court later and reclaim those rights and responsibilities. At the time of this document's creation, there is no information available on adoption assistance on the Virgin Islands.

Guardianship

The biggest difference between adoption and guardianship is that guardianship does not take away all the birth parents' rights and responsibilities. Parents typically keep certain rights and the obligation to financially support the child. Unlike adoption, the parents can go back to court and ask for the guardianship to be ended. For caregivers, guardianship allows access to services on behalf of the child that otherwise might prove impossible while not changing family relationships, like making grandma legally mom.

Guardianship assistance payments may be available to kin/grandfamily caregivers who choose to get guardianship of the children in their care who are exiting the child welfare system. The Virgin Islands has an approved Title IV-E Guardianship Assistance Program.

Comparing Adoption and Guardianship

This chart, created by Generations United with support from the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption, is designed to help kinship foster parents compare adoption and guardianship as two options that you and the children in your care can pursue to exit foster care and create permanent families.

Legal Custody

Legal custody is similar to guardianship, but it is usually granted by a different court that has different procedures.

Other Options

Some places have laws that allow kin/grandfamily caregivers who do not want or have a legal relationship to the children in their care to access health care treatment and educational services on behalf of the children without going to court.

For more information on all these options, and to see what exists in different states in the U.S., see www.grandfamilies.org.

State Laws

Grandfamilies.org is a collaboration between Generations United, the American Bar Association Center on Children and the Law, and Casey Family Programs. It contains an easy-to-use, searchable database of state laws and legislation directly impacting kinship/grandfamilies. As of fall 2022, laws from the Virgin Islands and other territories are not available on the website. Nevertheless, you will find explanations of legal topic areas, practical implementation ideas, and many other resources.

Topics Covered:

- Adoption
- Care & Custody
- Education
- Federal Laws
- Financial Assistance
- Kinship Foster Care & Licensing
- Healthcare
- Housing
- Kinship Navigator Programs
- National Family Caregiver Support Program
- Notification & Engagement Of Relatives
- Guardianship Assistance

The online database of laws and legislation is at www.grandfamilies.org/Search-Laws.

Updates
